

Pierson's Perceptions

We've just broken the seal on the year 2020 and no matter where you look you will find East Central University playing positive roles in communities, here at home and around the world.

For starters, ECU's event calendar is loaded with exciting lectures and activities. We are thrilled to have Cheryl Brown Henderson bring her family's working legacy of racial equality to our campus. Chickasaw Gov. Bill Anoatubby will be at ECU to discuss the positive impact that tribes have on our entire state.

Dr. Christine Pappas traveled to our nation's capital with two Legal Studies students for a once-in-a-lifetime experience of witnessing the impeachment trial of a sitting president.

Dr. Mara Sukholutskaya, director of the Global Education program, continues to help ECU students blaze academic trails overseas. And Ada's own Dr. Tawfik Ramadan continues to honor students working in the field of neuroscience, which of course knows no boundaries.

So no matter where you look, ECU is making a positive impact. Our graduates are ambassadors and make it a habit of improving the communities in which they find themselves. Just remember, all those Tiger tracks start right here.

Dr. Katricia Pierson
President
East Central University

Tribal gaming is subject of Anoatubby speech at ECU

East Central University Distinguished Alumnus and Chickasaw Nation Governor Bill Anoatubby will serve as keynote speaker for the annual Lou Watkins Lecture.

The impact of tribal gaming on the Chickasaw Nation and Oklahoma will be the topic for Anoatubby's lecture, which also features a luncheon. The lecture is scheduled for 11:30 a.m. Tuesday, February 4, at Foundation Hall inside ECU's Chickasaw Business and Conference Center.

The event is free, but reservations should

TIGER TALES

Student to study a semester in Spain

Jacob Talkington, of Pauls Valley, will soon begin his nearly 5,000-mile journey to explore a new country and culture, all while continuing his studies there.

He will attend the University of Extremadura in Cáceres, Spain, this spring semester. Because it is a sister school to ECU, he can attend without having to pay extra tuition. Dr. Mara Sukholutskaya, a longtime Foreign Languages professor at ECU, is director of the University's Global Education program. She helps students explore the world through academic exchange opportunities. The experience of studying abroad provides a student with a much better understanding of different ethnic groups, cultures, philosophies, and traditions than a textbook or lecture, Sukholutskaya said.

Therapy dogs bring good vibes to finals

East Central University's Linscheid Library invited therapy dogs on campus for students to help relieve stress during finals week in December. The dogs are provided by "A New Leash on Life" – a non-profit organization in Oklahoma City. There were two to three therapy dogs available to help soothe as many as a hundred stressed students. The popular ECU campus event has taken place each semester the week before finals for the past three years.

Celebrating science and medicine

Ramadan Symposium marks 8th year at ECU

Outstanding professionals in the neuroscience field visited East Central University on January 22 for the eighth annual Raniyah T. Ramadan Symposium.

The Ramadan Symposium is named for the late Dr. Raniyah Ramadan, who was a research scientist in neuro-ophthalmology. The prestigious symposium was established and is sponsored by Dr. and Mrs. Tawfik Z. Ramadan, parents of the late Raniyah Ramadan.

"Our daughter had a belief in promoting science and research, especially in the neuroscience field," said Dr. Ramadan. "We do this because we feel that we belong to ECU."

The 2020 symposium featured presentations from Dr. Andriy Yabluchanskiy, Dr. Shannon Conley, Dr. Mike Beckstead, and ECU student Kay Woodring. Yabluchanskiy's presentation was on "Vascular Health and Memory." Conley presented on "Mechanisms of PRPH2-Associated Retinal Degeneration: A Basic Science Approach to Studying Disease Variability."

Beckstead's presentation was "Decline in Dopamine Neuron Function Precedes Disruption of Neuronal Structure in a Progressive Mouse Model of Parkinson's Disease." Woodring presented on "Transient Brain Microstate Activation and Sensory Processing in Fragile X Syndrome".

KENNEDY HONORED WITH CAMPUS BENCH

Rebecca Kennedy, who served as East Central University's public information officer for more than a decade, reclines on a bench dedicated to her years of faithful service. With Kennedy is her husband, Harrel, who also served many years at ECU.

Composers perform originals at concert

East Central University presented the 14th annual ECU Faculty, Students, and Friends Composer Concert in the Ataloo Theatre of ECU's Hallie Brown Ford Fine Arts Center on January 23.

The event featured new and original compositions written by ECU students and local artists. Participating in the concert were Tommy and Casey Long, Kellan Brown, Jamie Davis, Zach Garcia, Tori Davison, Zana Ebingha, Kelly Gage, Preston Phillips and Anna Tynsky.

W.T. SKYE GARCIA

ECU alum Angela Marshall and ECU art major Brooke Jackson-Holman provided visual inspiration.

ECU instructor W.T. Skye Garcia organized the event, which concluded with the presentation of scholarship awards.

and an admission ticket provided by U.S. Senator James Lankford of Oklahoma, a professor and two students flew to Washington, D.C. this week to witness part of the trial on Capitol Hill.

Dr. Christine Pappas, who teaches Political Science and Legal Studies at ECU, accompanied students MiKayla Lott and Rain Rehbein to the extremely rare political proceeding. President Trump's impeachment trial marks only the third such event in U.S. history.

Pappas and her students shared the event ticket, dividing observation time in the U.S. Senate chamber gallery.

"That was probably the tightest security I've ever seen," Pappas said. "They took everything you had on you before you entered the chamber. You couldn't even write anything down."

Pappas also took the students to the National Archives to view the original U.S. Constitution, paying particular attention to Article Two that outlines executive branch power – which is at the heart of Trump's impeachment trial.

ECU student Alex Benitez of Healdton is currently interning in Lankford's office as well, adding to ECU's presence this historic week in Washington.

President Katricia Pierson's assistance obtaining private funding for us," Pappas said. "That and Senator Lankford's recognition of the educational importance of these proceedings and his desire to bring students in to participate. I appreciate them both so much."

the event with Louise Young. The event, scheduled to coincide with Black History Month, is free and open to the public.

Henderson is one of three daughters of the late Rev. Oliver L. Brown, who in the fall of 1950 – along with 12 other parents in Topeka, Kansas, led by attorneys for the NAACP – filed suit on behalf of their children against the local board of education. Their case joined with cases from Delaware, South Carolina, Virginia and Washington, D.C. on appeal to the U.S. Supreme Court. On May 17, 1954, came the landmark decision known as Brown v. Board of Education.

Brown v. Board of Education of Topeka was a landmark case in which the U.S. Supreme Court Justices ruled unanimously that racial segregation of children in public schools was unconstitutional. The case became one of the cornerstones of the Civil Rights movement and helped establish the precedent that "separate-but-equal" education and other services were not, in fact, equal at all. Brown passed away in 1961 before he could see the impact of the decision.

Henderson is the founding president of the Brown Foundation for Educational Equity, Excellence and Research, and owner of Brown & Associates, an educational consulting firm. For an extended version of this story, please visit www.ecok.edu/news.

be made for the luncheon by contacting Dr. Christine Pappas at 580-559-5640.

Anoatubby, a 1972 graduate of ECU, was elected governor of the Chickasaw Nation for the first time in 1987 and has held that position since. As governor, he manages more than 13,500 employees, more than 200 governmental programs and numerous tribal businesses.

Under his financial leadership, the Chickasaw Nation became one of the first tribal governments in the United States to be certified as an A-102 tribe, with superior ratings for management and fiscal controls.

The lectureship honors Lou Watkins, former chair of ECU's Political Science department. Its purpose is to bring recognized authorities to campus to address subjects of public interest at the local, state and national levels. Watkins taught Political Science at ECU from 1980 until 1991.

Serving as president of World Export Services Inc. and as a member of the Board of Regents for the Oklahoma Agricultural and Mechanical Colleges, Watkins was honored as a member of ECU's Distinguished Former Faculty in 2019.
