Success in any career today demands flexibility based in three skill areas: the ability to think critically, the ability to analyze information from a variety of sources and apply that analysis to solving problems, and the ability to communicate that analysis to others. These skills are particularly critical for careers in law, government, business, teaching and medicine, as well as for success in graduate or professional school.

Native American Studies

ECU offers both a Bachelor of Arts and a minor in Native American Studies. Native American Studies (NAS) is an interdisciplinary program that reflects an awareness of the issues which contemporary Native American communities and peoples confront. When students approach the multiplicity of Native American cultures from a variety of academic perspectives, they gain a deeper understanding of indigenous societies past and present. NAS courses are taught by university faculty members in History, Archaeology, Political Science, Business, Nursing, Legal Studies, Art, English, Professional Programs in Human Services, and other disciplines.

Cultural Resource Management

ECU also offers a Bachelor of Arts in Native American Studies - Cultural Resource Management (CRM).

CRM students learn to manage cultural resources that include heritage and the arts. Archaeology and the study of material culture is central to their work. In addition to understanding Native American history and culture, students pursuing this major will learn about tribal, federal, state and local regulations and guidelines that impact how we manage cultural resources.

$how Me the Money!

Graduates with a History degree typically earn between $42,000 and $68,000 for entry-level jobs. As a college graduate, you can earn an average of 75% more than those with only a high school degree, per The Chicago Tribune! (NACE 2021 Salary Report)
