Educational Technology

The Master of Education program in Education Technology is intended for the professional who desires to develop advanced knowledge and skills in the integration of technology to effectively support teaching and learning. This 32-hour program option offers a strong emphasis on various aspects of 21st century education, including designing, implementing, and evaluating digital learning environments. Students gain knowledge and skills that are beneficial both immediately and in the future as technology continues to evolve and impact education. Teaching career benefits include: increased instructional effectiveness and advance as a teacher leader. Non-teaching career options for K-12 schools include: educational technology director, technology integration coach/specialist; technology consultant. Options for higher education/corporate/government include: academic technology specialist; instructional designer; and technology trainer.

Educational Leadership

The graduate program option for Educational Leadership is designed for the graduate student specializing in administration for grades K-12. Special attention is given to the knowledge, skills and dispositions necessary to become an effective school principal. In order to complete this option, a student must hold and maintain a valid teaching certificate and must have completed two years of successful public school teaching.

Sports Administration

The Master of Education in Sports Administration is a 33-hour plan of study designed to provide financial, legal, promotional, and organizational knowledge necessary to manage sports programs and/or athletic facilities. This on-line program is structured to fit most schedules. Degree plans are available for students who plan to graduate in one, two, or three years. Graduates in the Sports Administration specialization work as: athletic coaches; sports management; athletic directors; sports finance; and/or athletic support staff.

Water Resource Policy & Management

The Master of Science in Water Resource Policy and Management degree supports the need for advanced understanding of the growing complexity of water issues that face communities at the state, national and global level. This degree trains students for leadership in making water policy decisions and prepares students who seek employment within federal and state environmental agencies, environmental non-governmental organizations, international development agencies, industry and environmental consulting firms. The program requires students to integrate and synthesize knowledge from multiple disciplines to address complex challenges of water resource decisions and to develop solutions that are socially acceptable, politically and economically viable, and environmentally sustainable.

> ONLINE

Graduate education offers students the opportunity to build upon prior educational achievements to increase knowledge and related skills for career or personal goals. As such, graduate courses assume students possess the commitments and academic skills necessary to approach increased levels of content mastery and application. Correspondingly, faculty will create courses with grading, testing, research and related standards, clearly exceeding those reflected in undergraduate education.

East Central University offers six master degrees with 17 options, three graduate certificates and one post-master certification. These programs satisfying requirements for advanced and provisional Oklahoma teaching certificates, Licensed Professional Counseling and Certified Rehabilitation Counselor, as well as other credentials.
