Application: All Faculty
Section F1.8 Faculty Rights and Privileges

F1.8 Faculty Rights and Privileges

F1.8.1 Academic Freedom

1. Non-tenured faculty members shall be afforded the same rights and academic freedom as tenured faculty. Faculty members are entitled to freedom regarding research and in the publication of the results, subject to the adequate performance of instructional and non-instructional duties. Patent and copyright ownership will vest consistent with Board policy.
2. Faculty members are entitled to freedom in the classroom in discussing their subject, but the faculty should be objective in teaching of a controversial matter which has relation to that subject and of controversial topics introduced by students. Faculty members should not introduce controversial matters that have little or no relation to the subject of instruction.
3. University faculty members are individuals, members of a learned profession, and representatives of the university. When the faculty member speaks or writes as an individual, there shall be freedom from institutional censorship or discipline, but faculty position in the community imposes special obligations. As a person of learning and an education representative, the faculty member should remember that the public may judge the profession and the university by faculty utterances. Hence, the faculty member should, at all times, be accurate, should exercise appropriate restraint, should show respect for the opinions of others, and should make every effort to indicate that faculty members do not speak on behalf of the university.
4. Academic freedom should be distinguished clearly from constitutional freedoms, which all citizens enjoy equally under the law. Academic freedom is an additional assurance to those who teach and pursue knowledge and thus, pertains to rights to expression regarding teaching and research within specific areas of recognized professional competencies.
5. Administrators must protect, defend, and promote academic freedom.

F1.8.1.1 Academic Responsibility

1. The concept of academic freedom must be accompanied by an equally demanding concept of academic responsibility. The concern of the university and its members for academic freedom safeguards must extend equally to requiring responsible service, consistent with the objectives of the university.
2. Faculty members have responsibilities to their discipline and to the advancement of knowledge generally. Their primary obligation in this respect is to seek and to state the truth as they see it. To this end, they shall devote their energies to developing and improving their scholarly competence. They shall exercise critical self-discipline and judgment in using, extending, and transmitting knowledge and they shall practice intellectual honesty.
3. Faculty members have responsibility to their students. They shall encourage, in students, the free pursuit of learning and independence of mind, while holding before them the highest scholarly and professional standards. Faculty members shall show respect for the student as an individual and adhere to their proper role as intellectual guides and counselors. They shall endeavor to define the objectives of their courses and to devote their teaching to the realization of those objectives. A proper academic climate can be maintained only when faculty members meet their fundamental responsibilities regularly, such as preparing for and meeting their assignments, conferring with and advising students, evaluating fairly and participating in group deliberations which contribute to the growth and development of students and the university. All faculty members also have the responsibility to accept those reasonable duties assigned to them within their fields of competency, whether curricular, co-curricular, or extra-curricular. Faculty members make every reasonable effort to foster honest academic conduct and to assure that their evaluations of students reflects their true merit. They do not exploit students for private advantage and acknowledge significant assistance from them. They protect students' academic freedom.

4. Institutions of higher education are committed to open and rational discussion as a principal means for the clarification of issues and the solution of problems. In the solution of certain difficult problems, all members of the academic community must take note of their responsibility to society, to the institution, and to each other, and must recognize that at times the interest of each may vary and will have to be reconciled. The use of physical force, harassment of any kind, or other disruptive acts that interfere with ordinary institutional activities, with freedom of movement from place to place on the campus, or with freedom of all members of the academic community to pursue their rightful goals are the antithesis of academic freedom and responsibility. So, also, are acts that, in effect, deny freedom to speak, to be heard, to study, to teach, to administer and to pursue research. It is incumbent upon each member of the academic community to be acquainted with their individual responsibilities, as delineated by appropriate institutional statements found in the faculty handbook.
5. Faculty members have responsibilities to the educational institution in which they work. While maintaining their right to criticize and to seek revisions, they shall observe the stated regulations of the institution. Faculty members shall determine the amount and character of the work they do outside their institution with due regard to their paramount responsibilities within it. When considering the interruption or termination of their service, the faculty member recognizes the effect of such a decision upon the program of the institution and gives due notice of the decision.
6. Faculty members have responsibilities to their community. As a person engaged in a profession that depends upon freedom for its health and integrity, the faculty members have a particular obligation to promote conditions of free inquiry and to further public understanding of academic freedom.
